Firework arson to blame for house fire

ABANDONED SHELL KNOB HOME SET ABLAZE AFTER FIREWORKS THROWN INSIDE

Charlea Estes-Jones & Isaac Estes-Jones

A Shell Knob fire is being investigated as possible arson started by fireworks last week. Central Crossing Fire Department was dispatched to a residential structure fire in the Turkey 2 area last week on Wednesday, July 3, at 7:52 p.m.

Crews on scene worked to extinguish the flames. Firefighters reported smoke was showing from the front of the home when they arrived, and the fire inside was put out quickly. The abandoned home was unoccupied at the time of the blaze.

As crews looked over the damage, it was suspected the fire in question was arson-related and started by consumergrade fireworks inside the vacant building.

Central Crossing Fire staff reported the suspected arson to the State Fire Marshal's Office as well as the Stone County Sheriff's Department. Officers with the Stone County Sheriff's Department were also on scene.

Central Crossing fire chief Rusty Rickard confirmed the Church camp goers donate $2,300 to flood victims

Vinnie Roberts

On Wednesday, June 26, dozens of Cassville homes and businesses were damaged by flash flooding. In response, the children of Camp SPARK, a summer camp program sponsored by First Baptist Church of Cassville, took recovery matters into their own hands and shifted the focus of their charitable efforts to helping victims of the flood.

According to Jeff Allee, minister of recreation and education for First Baptist Church, the children of Camp SPARK were already collecting money for another worthy cause. When the disaster hit, both the campers and the administration of the church made the decision to divert those funds to a more immediate local charitable

"We originally were collecting money for Operation: Christmas Child," said Allee. "There's a special project called the Thousand Box Project that we were going to be a part of. The kids were all excited about that, but then, the flood hit.

"So, [church leadership] started talking and praying about it and talking with the kids about it. We decided to change that and move those funds to disaster relief efforts to people that may have had damage or lost things in the Camp SPARK averages about 177 campers a day. Those campers were able to raise approximately $2,300 in offerings. On Thursday, June 27, those funds were presented to the Cassville branch of the Ozark Area Community Action Corporation (OACAC) to aid in buying and distributing cleanup supplies for families affected by the flooding.

According to Allee, the church's governing body was happy to assist the community in any way that they can. He also remarked on the willingness of the campers to help the community in times

"It's one of the reasons we exist," said Allee. "Our job as a church is to minister and take care of the folks here as best we can. We're fulfilling something that we're challenged to do. It excites me that the kids saw that as a possibility for this."

Funds for cleanup supplies are still in use at Cassville's OACAC center, according to supervisor Gail Reed. For more information on OACAC's supply funds for families in need during the flood cleanup, contact the center at (417) 847-2140.

Camp SPARK goers opted to donate the offering collected during the camp at First Baptist Church of Cassville to locals suffering flood damage. In all, $2,300 was presented to OACAC by the church's children's minister Jeanna Jones (right) to Neighborhood Center representative Debby Gemmecke.

Local brother-sister duo take Honor Flight together

Vinnie Roberts

Korean War Veteran Howard William Osterkamp once said, "Some gave all, all gave some." These words have been memorialized on the hearts and minds of Americans for decades to represent the astounding sacrifice made by American soldiers over the years.

In order to honor the heroic men and women of years past, Earl Morse, a physician's assistant and retired Air Force captain from Springfield, Ohio, began the Honor Flight program in 2005. The program takes veterans on a chartered flight to visit the war memorials in Washington D.C.

On May 15, Cassville resident and Habitat for Humanity president David Hermann, as well as his sister, Dianne Hermann, of Joplin, were given the honor of boarding one of these flights. The Hermanns are one of few sibling duos who have had the honor of taking the flight together. In addition, 20 other members of the local chapter of the Veterans Taskforce of America were given the honor of boarding the same flight.

David and Dianne both served in the United States tired as a specialist IV in air traffic control. The siblings come from a long line of military service with their greatgreat-grandfather having fought in the Civil War and their father having fought in the Korean War.

For the Hermanns, the flight was an invaluable opportunity to see the monuments erected to honor their service.

"It was incredible," said Dianne. "I used to live in northern Virginia and work in Washington DC, so I've either been to most of the monuments or seen them getting built. When I went on the honor flight, I went as a different person. I got to see them through different eyes.

Going as a veteran and being honored was a lot different than when I lived there."

"It really was an honor, Army during the Vietnam not only to go with my veter-War. David retired as a pla- an friends, but an honor to be toon sergeant and Dianne re- counted worthy to be on this flight," said David. "Everyone that went on that flight came back glad. There's not a single person that came back wishing they hadn't gone."

> David explained that on the Honor Flight, veterans received the red carpet treatment. The flight was chartered and paid for by the organization, as were the buses that were used to escort the veterans around the city. The buses each had their own doctor and nurse on standby in case of emergency. In addition, he said that both TSA and D.C. Police made extra accommodations for the trip.

> "We were escorted right onto the plane. We were served like a special group," explained David. "It was an fire was started by fireworks. He said, "There is no doubt. It was most definitely arsonrelated and most definitely fireworks. Someone had thrown consumer-grade mortars into a residential home that had been abandoned."

Rickard said the home was located on Rosewood Street just inside Stone County.

He added, "From the best we can tell, someone threw three mortars inside the home. Two of them went off and one of them did not, but they managed to catch the house on fire."

Rickard said the fire was quickly extinguished with crew on scene approximately 45 minutes.

The chief said a person passing by was to thank for the fire being reported. He said, "A passerby happened to notice the smoke and flames and called it in."

Central Crossing Fire Department received mutual aid from Eagle Rock - Golden -Mano Fire Department and Southern Stone County Fire Department.

Stone County Sheriff Doug Rader did not have information available for release at press time. "The State Fire Marshal usually investigates arsons," he said.

Additional information from the State Fire Marshal's office was not available at press time. We will update this story as more information becomes available.

Arkansas driver injured after pickup overturns at Roaring River

Charlea Estes-Jones

A single-pickup wreck at Roaring River State Park last week left the driver in serious condition and requiring a life flight last week. On Wednesday, July 3, Clifford S. Hagler, 60, of Berryville, Ark., was driving on Highway 112 at the park when his truck flipped.

HONOR FLIGHT from FRONT

honor to be on that flight. When we landed, we had a police escort all over town. Police would go through and physically stop traffic so that we could get through. Every place that we stopped, people were shaking our hands."

According to David and Dianne, while at the memorials several groups were waiting for them to thank them for their service.

"We were on five buses," said David. "Everything was already prearranged. We went to all the monuments. We started out at the World War II monument, the Korean War, the Iwo Jima monument, all of them."

"They had bagpipists there at the World War II monument and they had a ceremony for us," said Dianne. "Everywhere we went, people wanted to know who we were and what we were doing. Everywhere we went, there were people there who would stop and talk to us and thank us for our service. They were just so supportive and appreciative. That was a big thing for us."

Several of the groups who awaited were students on class field trips.

"I overheard one of the teachers there say that they came there on that day intentionally when they knew the honor flight would be there because they made thank you cards for veterans," explained Dianne.

The trip served as an opportunity for the Hermann family to pay respect to their father, a Korean war veteran,

"We got to take a picture holding our dad's dog tags in front of the Korean War monument," said David.

Veterans on the trip were all accompanied by an escort, known as guardian. The escort served as that veteran's right hand for the day. For David, this was an opportunity to bond with his son over the memories of his service in Vietnam.

"The idea is that your guardian is no more than five steps away from you. If you need something, your guardian is there for you," explained David. "If you need to go somewhere, that guardian gets you there. There were a lot of veterans that were matched up with people they didn't know. It was an honor to have my son there with me as mine."

The tour around D.C.

concluded with a trip to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier to witness the changing of the guard.

"I think the most impactful part of the flight was the last stop, which was as the International Cemetery. We got to see the changing of the guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier," said Dianne. "They have a changing of the guard every half hour and people just line up to see it. That was very impactful and very emotional to see. It made me really proud to be an American. It made me really glad to know that people appreciate the sacrifices that those in the military have made."

The red carpet treatment didn't end with the tour. Once back in the Springfield Airport, the veterans were met with a celebration in their honor.

"When we got back to Springfield, they had a welcoming committee, welcoming us back home," explained Dianne. "Someone told me that there were about 3,000 people there. There was a band, there were current military people there in uniform; there were spouses and family members. It was incredible to have that kind of day in Washington and feel so honored and then come back to Springfield to a homecoming. It was emotional.

"A lot of us were Vietnam and Vietnam-era veterans. Those are the people who never got a welcome home. This is that welcome home for some of us."

The Hermanns were honored to share the experience and offered some words of encouragement for veterans considering taking the flight themselves.

"I would encourage any veteran that needs closure to sign up and go," said David. "This was all about going back, and not necessarily remembering, but getting closure. It's going there to say, 'I did that. These are the friends that I lost, and now, I can walk away," said David.

"I'd like to encourage veterans to put in their applications for the Honor Flight, because you will understand just how Americans feel about what they did," said Dianne.

David concluded by thanking VTA president Ken Johnson, of Springfield, without whom he says the event may have never happened for their chapter.

How to cut energy costs this summer

Summer is a season of rest and relaxation. Warm air and abundant sunshine often inspire a laid back feeling that lasts until the leaves begin to fall off the trees in early autumn. But summer also can be hard on homeowners, particularly in regard to their monthly energy bills.

As summer heats up, energy bills may rise right along with the mercury in the backyard thermometer. Warmer temperatures outside compel many people to rely more and more on their air conditioners, leading to a spike in energy bills. Fortunately, there are ways to lower summertime energy bills without sacrificing comfort on hot days and

• Upgrade your insulation. People who own their homes can conduct an inspection of their homes' insulation to see if it can be upgraded. Direct Energy, which provides energy to more than four million home and business customers across North America, recommends sealing any drafts around windows or doors with weather stripping or spray foam. Sealing drafts can ensure cool air stays inside the home on hot days, potentially preventing homeowners from having to run their air conditioners on full blast to keep their homes cool.

• Upgrade your thermostat. Homeowners who don't already have a smart thermostat can install one to help lower their energy costs. The Alliance to Save Energy notes that such thermostats can help homeowners optimize their homes' energy usage. Smart thermostats allow homeowners to control the climate in their homes remotely while also showing homeowners their energy consumption in real time. Smart thermostats can show homeowners just how long it takes to cool a home, allowing homeowners to keep their air conditioners off while no one is home but still ensuring the home is comfortable, and that no energy was needlessly wasted to make it so, when they arrive home at night. • Reconsider how you use your appliances. Bankrate. com notes that washing machines and dishwashers consume the same amount of water and energy whether these appliances are full or not. Wait to use washing machines and dishwashers until you have full loads. This provides more bang for your buck. In addition, hand-dry dishes and hang clothes on a backyard clothesline to save even more energy.

Energy costs tend to rise when summer hits full swing. But a few simple measures can help homeowners cut costs without sacrificing comfort.

Pirates of Penzance steals audience's hearts

The Cassville Arts Council put on their inaugural performance with the Pirates of Penzance. The comedic operetta kicked off on Thursday, June 27, at the Cassville Schools Event Center. The comedy is set in Victorian England in the region of Penzance. It tells the story of Fredrick, a young man who is finally out of his indentures to a Pirate King. He meets Mabel, a young ward of a Major-General, and they fall in love.

Whisman takes second place at FBLA Nationals

Purdy High School FBLA member Shana Whisman represented the Eagles at the FBLA National Leadership Conference in San Antonio, Texas, June 28 through July 2. Whisman competed against students from across the nation in the Client Service competition, bringing home the second place trophy. FBLA Adviser Kay Wright noted of Whisman's accomplishment, "She remained poised and confident throughout the competition and just enjoyed the experience. I am so proud of her."

New provider joins CoxHealth Center Shell Knob

A new provider has joined CoxHealth Center Shell Knob and is excited about helping patients throughout the community improve their health.

Lauren Argo, a nurse practitioner, decided to pursue health care as a profession because of her father. Unfortunately, several years ago, he passed away from lung cancer only three months after receiving a diagnosis. The tragedy ultimately fueled her desire to increase access to health care in rural areas.

"That experience inspired me to go back to school and get into medicine to help make health care more available in rural communities," says Lauren.

After receiving a degree in Biology and Chemistry from William Jewell University, she went back to school at Cox College, where she received her Bachelor's in Nursing and began her career as an in-

Lauren later decided to continue her education, and graduated from the family nurse practitioner program through Maryville University - which provided a pathway to serve the Shell Knob community.

"When I interviewed at CoxHealth Center Shell Knob I knew that it was where I needed to be," says Lauren. "I love rural health because I grew up in a rural community and with the experience of my father having a late diagnoses of cancer, I have a passion to provide care and stress preventative medicine to rural communities."

As a nurse practitioner, Lauren does many of the same things as a doctor such as prescribing medication, examining patients, diagnosing illnesses, providing treatment and creating plans for better health.

"I really care about my

"Give a man a fish, and he will be fed for the day. Teach a man to fish, and he'll go broke with all the rods, tackle, tackle boxes, special clothing and other gear needed!"

-Jenny Madsen

Fishing is a universal language. Just take a walk down the river and you'll see young, old, rich, poor, men and women, of all races, all side-by-side, enjoying the same ac-

It's not uncommon to see strangers helping each other untangle line or trading tips on "what's biting best today." Fishing is a common opener for conversation and that makes the river a place of unity. We have one common goal there - to enjoy the hobby and be a part of nature. There's even a difference in the atmosphere... where things are a little bit simpler, and time moves a little bit slower.

The sound of the water is soothing and relaxing and brings a sense of peace to weary visitors. There's no denying that in this day and age, people long for that sense of simplicity and peace... that's why the park is so busy all the time. I am not what I would consider an avid fisherwoman, though I do enjoy it. But more than anything, it's the environment that draws me back again and again to Roaring River State Park. It's the reason we moved here in the first place. It's the quiet slowing of the soul that happens when you dip your line in the water, or take a walk in the woods, or sit on a bench and just watch people.

Jenny Madsen lives in Cassville with her husband, Sam, and their two young boys. They own At The River Consignment on the square in Cassville. In her spare time, Jenny and her family enjoy many outdoor activities, especially hiking and fishing at Roaring River State Park.

Barry County Health Department releases June Food Service Report

The Barry County Health Department divides food service code violations into two categories: Priority and Core items.

Priority items are more likely than other violations to contribute to food contamination or illness and/ or injury.

Core items, although important to the overall hygiene of the establishment, do not necessarily present an immediate threat to food contamination or illness and/or injury.

A report for each establishment that is inspected shows the number of priority items, along with a short statement as to the nature of the violations. The report also shows the number of core items but doesn't list the nature of those viola-

Arvest recognized as Platinum Business Partner

Jaylyn Clevenger, Financial Sales Representative, Arvest Bank Shell Knob, was presented a plaque recognizing Arvest Bank as a Platinum level Business Partner of the Central Crossing Senior Center (CCSC), located in Shell Knob. The plaque recognizes this level of support for 2019, but in reality, Arvest Bank has generously supported the Senior Center for years prior to that and their level of support has gone a long way toward improving the facilities as well as the day-to-day management of the CCSC. Area seniors have benefited greatly in large part as a result of Arvest Bank's ongoing, generous support and partnership.

Baling wet hay becomes hot news

High-moisture grass baled above 24 percent moisture can cause spontaneous combustion. Overheated bales can burn down a hay barn.

Craig Roberts, University of Missouri forage specialist, said frequent rains this year help grass growth, but it's been bad for making hay. He's part of the team on a weekly MU Extension teleconference between state and regional specialists.

Even if damp bales don't go up in flames, nutrient quality cooks out of hay. Heat destroys carbohydrates and makes proteins indigestible to livestock.

"It's been hard to find more than a two-day time with sunshine to cure hay," Roberts said.

Pat Guinan, MU Extension climatologist, said May is normally the rainiest month on average. This year breaks rain records. Some places, particularly in southwestern Missouri, got more than 25 inches of rain in May. More rain remains in forecasts.

Missouri farmers need hay after two drought years depleted their stored feed. With short drying periods, farmers who cut hay shouldn't rush to bale it while it's still moist. Just accept the rain and then let the hay dry.

"Rain removes some soluble carbohydrates, but proteins remain intact when moist," Roberts says. "Poor hay feeds better than moldy hay resulting from damp baled hay."

All hay carries bacteria. Some thermophilic, or heatloving, bacteria cause fires in confinement. Hay should not be baled above 20 percent moisture, Roberts said. Baling at 25-30 percent moisture asks for trouble.

Haymaking varies widely across Missouri. If producers were lucky enough to harvest first-cutting hay, that removed low-quality seed stems. Second-cutting hay should be higher quality without stems.

"We may make lots of hay, but it's not high-quality hay," Roberts said.

Mold and fire are not the only problems. Reports from field specialists told of farmers losing fields of forage to armyworms or alfalfa weevils. Rains didn't slow pests.

FSA extended prevented plant crop reporting deadline

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farm Service Agency (FSA) is extending the prevented plant crop reporting deadline for Missouri producers affected by spring flooding and excessive Producers now have until July 15, 2019, to report acres they intended to plant this spring but could not due to weather conditions. The new deadline coincides with the July 15, 2019, FSA crop acreage reporting deadline that is already in place.

"Producers need to report prevented plant acres to retain eligibility for FSA program benefits," Brent Hampy, State executive director said. "In many areas of the state, excessive moisture has made it challenging for producers to get into their fields to plant and this deadline extension provides reporting flexibility."

Normally, the prevented plant reporting deadline is 15 calendar days after the final planting date for a crop as established by FSA and the Risk Management Agency (RMA). The prevented plant reporting deadline extension to July 15 only applies to FSA and does not change any RMA crop insurance reporting deadline requirements.

FSA's Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP). Producers should check with their local FSA office regarding prevented plant provisions for NAP-covered crops. Producers are encouraged to contact their local FSA office

However, the extension does not apply to crops covered by

Monett author releases new book

Did you ever have secret that was so secret you would be willing die for it?

That is exactly what happens in Thomas S. Mulvaugh's Blood Covenant of the Sergeants Club. This is Mulvaugh's fourth book in the 'Ozark Blood Rick Ryder' Mysteries series. After two years of solving murders, the 'dollar a day' detective wants nothing more than to spend the summer with his family. However, those dreams are quickly up ended when his neighbor and Crowder College professor stumbles into his teenage sister's birthday party covered in blood and begging him to save the others. What is happening? Someone is murdering the members of the Sergeants Club, a club Ryder's mother created when she was a student at Crowder College.

Like Mulvaugh's other books, Blood Covenant of the Sergeants Club is a mix of both fiction and real places, giving the reader the sense of being there. He covers places like Barry County, Roaring River State Park, Neosho and Crowder College.

"[Crowder College] is my old stomping grounds. I went to college there, way back in the 1980's. I guess I am the only alumni that came back to his old school looking for a place to put a body," Mulvaugh laughed. "I love Crowder, its history, the way it is laid out. It just seemed the perfect place to set the story."

Thomas S. Mulvaugh is the pen name of local author Paul Adam Herd who grew up in Cassville and currently makes his home in Monett with his wife, Karla, and their two cats.

Blood Covenant of the Sergeants Club is now available from Amazon as both Kindle and paperback. Or autographed copies are available from www.tsmulvaugh.com. The books are also available locally at Whitley's Pharmacy and the Barry County Museum in Cassville

BARRY COUNTY ADVERTISER

Southwest FFA officers attend Eureka Springs retreat

Elizabeth Ross, Southwest helped greatly when the FFA reporter time came to establish the

On June 26, 2019, the Southwest FFA officer team began three days together in Eureka Springs, Ark., on an officers' retreat. During the retreat, the students were challenged with team building, becoming better leaders, planning for the year and looking for positive outcomes of the time spent.

The first team building exercise on the agenda was grocery shopping with groups of three. This started off the retreat by establishing valuable communication skills.

Once arriving in Eureka Springs and getting settled into the house, having all the groceries put away, they began doing workshops. The four returning officers, Leland Colf, Aubrey Cornell, Bonnie Robbins, and Laney Moore, were all in charge of leading numerous workshops throughout the week. Leland began with one which entailed information on taking risks: when, who, and where it is appropriate to take risks. This workshop, and many others like it, benefited them greatly throughout the retreat.

These workshops, as well as the previously developed, helped greatly when the time came to establish the 2019-2020 Program of Activities, as well as the goal and outcome of each event.

They also were given a topic and asked to write a two-minute presentation about the topic. The topics varied from 'the color red,' 'the Smith-Hughes Act of 1917' or 'something other than FFA which you are passionate about.' The students presented these and accepted critique from their peers but were also told a number of good things which they did during their presentation.

The officers then gave another presentation. They picked a quote and led a 15-minute group discussion about said quote. Their presentation included what it meant, how it related to them personally, and opened up discussion among their fellow officers.

Although it only being three days long, the officer team grew closer and grew individually. The workshops, public speaking, group discussions and advice from older members were beneficial to individual growth and seeing leaders in all of them. The officers also spent bonding time at the lake, at Turpentine Creek, competing in pool tournaments, making s'mores and cooking each meal together.

Southwest FFA is looking forward to a wonderful school year with many great activities planned.

Highway Patrol To Host Youth Career Day

On Tuesday, July 23, the Missouri State Highway Patrol will host a Youth Career Day at the Springfield Boys & Girls Club, 1410 North Freemont, Springfield.

This program will provide a unique hands-on experience for the area youth, and enable them to learn about the Missouri State Highway Patrol. The program will give the participants the opportunity to better understand how the Patrol functions within their communities, while at the same time exposing them to the many career paths the Highway Patrol offers.

Troopers hope to strengthen the bond between themselves and the communities they serve. It is hoped the Youth Career Day will result in better ways to communicate with and understand the viewpoints of today's young men and women.

The only 100 percent survivable traffic crash is the one that never happens. Make sure everyone in the vehicle is properly restrained in a seat belt or child restraint. Every day as we travel on Missouri's roadways, we trust that every other driver on the road is going to obey the speed limit, pay attention, and drive sober. "Don't Violate The Trust."
