Several complaints have been raised by residents who live near land application sites and the lagoons over the last several months, citing the impact on their property values, health, and livelihood and the potential negative impact on area water sources. The Missouri Department of Natural Resources (MoDNR) issued an enforcement discretion letter to Denali on November 29, after an October investigation of overapplication on property in Southwest City, stating

SLUDGE (Stop Land Use Damaging our Ground and Environment), a committee formed in response to the adverse effects of the lagoons and land application, represented by attorney Stephen Jeffery of Jeffrey Law Group, has filed a lawsuit against MoDNR for "failing to enforce the law by allowing Denali Water Solutions to operate in the state of Missouri without any permits." According to Steele, Denali was instructed to stop storing and

DON'T RAISE THE RISK
During any kind of project around your home or property, remember there's more overhead than buildings, trees and sky. A ladder can easily reach high enough to cause potentially fatal contact with power lines.
Always look up before raising or moving a ladder to make sure it's at least 10 feet from any electrical lines. Keep your eye on power lines and your mind on working safely.

DNR awards a nearly $2.6 million grant to H2Ozarks

The Missouri Department of Natural Resources has awarded a nearly $2.6 million Onsite Wastewater Treatment Grant to H2Ozarks to provide financial assistance to homeowners with on-site wastewater concerns. H2Ozarks is a nonprofit organization that works to preserve the water quality of the upper White River watershed in southwest Missouri and northwest Arkansas.
Properly constructed and maintained onsite wastewater treatment systems are an important part of protecting public health and the environment. The Onsite Wastewater Treatment Grant program offers funding for qualified homeowners to repair or replace their failing onsite wastewater treatment systems, or to connect to a nearby centralized system. H2Ozarks will use the grant to educate, assist and pass through funds to qualified homeowners within specified watersheds in central and southwest Missouri. The grant program ends September 2025.
“We are committed to making Missouri a healthy and safe place to live for families and individuals,” said Governor Mike Parson. “Onsite wastewater treatment systems are essential infrastructure that support public health and economic vitality of communities where centralized sewer systems do not exist.”
“Thinking creatively and building new partnerships are becoming more crucial to protecting public and environmental health,” said Dru Buntin, director of the Missouri Department of Natural Resources. “This grant helps us protect public health and the environment through a new regional partnership that will help, which improves the quality of life for Missourians.”
The department is committed to assisting Missourians with water and wastewater infrastructure improvement projects. Through its Financial Assistance Center, the department provides funding opportunities for qualified entities with water quality, wastewater, and drinking water infrastructure needs. This project will be funded wholly or in part with monies received from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Denali From Front

land applying under the fertilizer exception they were given in June in the November 29 letter. However, they can still pick up, haul, land apply or inject on farm ground as long as they are hired to do so by the company producing it. She stated that previously, Denali was being paid to assume ownership of the waste, and it was theirs to dispose of it how they wanted. Now, the producers keep ownership of the waste and are only hiring Denali to spread it for them, and they are giving it to the farmers for free.

“We DO NOT want to be the next superfund site or, even worse, toxic wastelands,” said Steele. “Missouri needs to take a long hard look at what other states have had to find out the hard way, and that is that this so-called fertilizer is poisoning the land and the citizens of our great state.”

“We need Missouri residents to open their eyes and ears and see this practice for what it is, TOXIC,” Steele opined. “We need to encourage our senators to stand up for what is right and protect our lands, homes, health, and livelihoods.”

Senator Jill Carter, R-Granby, is sponsoring legislation, SB908, when the General Assembly returns in January 2024, creating provisions relating to the disposal of animal processing waste.

“The wording in our bill amends a previous bill to clarify that we are not trying to regulate basins or lagoons. Just what is put in them or land applied directly from the truck,” Steele said. “It clarifies that agricultural materials (manure, fertilizer) are deemed animal processing residuals and are okay for land application if they meet nutrient criteria.

“It clarifies that residuals from commercial and industrial is solid waste and will need proper permits for solid waste,” Steele added. “It seems like simple little word adages, but they pack a powerful punch if we can get it passed.”

Sameul Liebl, Director of Communications with Denali Water Solutions released the following statement.

“Based on guidance issued by Missouri DNR, Denali is working to adjust our operations in Missouri to continue to serve the state’s food manufacturing facilities. While Denali awaits permits to resume responsible and environmentally friendly land application in Missouri, we will do all we can to support customers and Missouri farmers as they continue to provide food and employment for Missouri residents.

Denali has a long track record of responsibly handling the residuals that result from water treatment at food manufacturing facilities, recycling these residuals as valuable organic fertilizers, and protecting clean water in Missouri. Safety and environmental stewardship are our priorities. When incidents do happen, Denali mobilizes its vast team and resources to address situations quickly and responsibly.

Denali contracts with certified third-party labs to check for potential contaminants, and we share the test results with the State of Missouri and our farmer partners. We only land apply material when it is safe to do so and beneficial for the land and the farmers with whom we work. Denali works closely with government agencies to ensure our activities are safe and meet or exceed all regulatory requirements.

More than 100 Missouri farmers rely on fertilizers from Denali, and dozens of Missouri food manufacturers, employing more than 10,000 Missouri workers, depend on our services to continue their business operations. Without the ability for Denali to operate, Missouri food companies will face extremely challenging and costly decisions. We are committed to ensuring a positive outcome for Missouri farmers, businesses and communities.”

IN THE BARRY COUNTY ADVERTISER

How to Ease the Winter Blues
Dear Savvy Senior,
What can you tell me about seasonal affective disorder? I've always disliked winter, but since I retired and am home a lot more, the gray, cold winter months make me feel really blue.
Sad Sam
Dear Sam,
If you get depressed in the winter but feel better in spring and summer, you may indeed have seasonal affective disorder, or SAD, a wintertime depression that affects roughly 5 percent of Americans.
In most cases, SAD is related to the loss of sunlight in the winter months. Reduced sunlight can upset natural sleep-wake cycles and other circadian rhythms that can affect the body. It can also cause a drop in the brain chemical serotonin, which affects mood, and can increase the levels of the hormone melatonin, which can make you feel more tired and lethargic.
If you think you may have SAD, a trip to your doctor's office is the best way to diagnose it or you can take a SAD "self-assessment" test at the Center for Environmental Therapeutics website at CET.org/assessments. If you find that you have SAD, here are several treatment options and remedies that can help.

Light therapy: The most effective treatment for SAD is sitting in front of a specialized light therapy box for 20 to 30 minutes a day, within the first hour of waking up in the morning. Light therapy mimics outdoor light to cause a change in brain chemicals linked to mood.

While you can buy a light box without a prescription, it's best to use it under the guidance of a health care provider and follow the manufacturer's guidelines. Most health insurance plans do not cover the cost.
The best light therapy lamps provide 10,000 lux of illumination, many times stronger than typical indoor light, and have a diffuser screen that filters out ultraviolet rays and projects downward toward the eyes.
Some top-rated light therapy products include the Carex Day-Light Classic Plus Bright Lamp ($145); Northern Light Technology Boxelite-OS ($205); and the budget friendly Verilux HappyLight Luxe ($70), all of which are available at Amazon.com.
Cognitive behavioral therapy: Even though SAD is considered to be a biological problem, identifying and changing thought and behavior patterns can help alleviate symptoms too. To help you with this, choose a therapist who specializes in cognitive behavioral therapy and who has experience in treating SAD. To locate someone in your area, Psychology Today offers a search tool at Psychology-Today.com/us/therapists/cognitive-behavioral-cbt.

Antidepressants: Some people with SAD benefit from antidepressant treatments too. Some proven medications to ask your doctor about are selective serotonin reuptake inhibitors (SSRIs) and the extended-release antidepressant bupropion.
But keep in mind that it may take several weeks to notice full benefits from an antidepressant. In addition, you may have to try different medications before you find one that works well for you and has the fewest side effects.
Lifestyle remedies: Some other things you can do to help alleviate your SAD symptoms include making your environment sunnier and brighter. So, open up your blinds, sit closer to bright windows and get outside as much as you can. Even on cold or cloudy days, outdoor light can help, especially if you spend some time outside within two hours of getting up in the morning.
Moderate exercise such as walking, swimming, yoga and even tai chi can also help alleviate SAD symptoms, as can social activities.
Send your senior questions to: Savvy Senior, P.O. Box 5443, Norman, OK 73070, or visit SavvySenior.org. Jim Miller is a contributor to the NBC Today show and author of "The Savvy Senior" book.
